

Thailand Refinery

Rethinking refiners after the sell off

- We now think the downsides for Thai refiners are mostly priced in, particularly for the two refiners with US parent companies, SPRC and ESSO.
- We think the four government-owned refiners – TOP, IRPC, PTTGC, BCP – will have to comply with the government's request and subsidise fuel prices for three months.
- SPRC and ESSO are our top picks given their strong and visible earnings growth.

Windfall regulatory risk led to freefall in refiners' share prices

After Thai refinery company share prices collapsed by 15-25% within five days last week as a result of the government's demand that they subsidise fuel prices by up to THB8.5b a month from Jul-Sep 2022, we now think the downsides are mostly priced in, particularly for the two refiners with US parent companies – SPRC, which is owned by Chevron, and ESSO, owned by ExxonMobil. Given the closing share prices of Thai refiners on 20 Jun-22, we believe their values are now attractive, and estimate the discounts to their replacement values from largest to smallest at 58% for IRPC, 52% for ESSO, 50% for TOP, 37% for BCP, 33% for PTTGC, and 20% for SPRC.

Dual gasoline plays – SPRC and ESSO – are more favorable

We see potential upsides for the share prices of SPRC and ESSO, given 1) the low possibility that the two US-owned refiners will comply with the government's subsidy requests due to the government's lack of legal standing to enforce it; 2) their strong earnings outlook for 2Q22-4Q22, backed by their high market GRMs of over USD15/bbl, their low cost structures, higher gasoline yield than local peers, and greater upsides for higher utilisation rates; and 3) no hedging losses vs the expected large hedging losses for refiners owned by PTT group (TOP, IRPC, and PTTGC) and the government (BCP).

Problematic four – TOP, PTTGC, IRPC, BCP – face cloudy 3Q22 net profit outlook

We think the four government-owned refiners – TOP, IRPC, PTTGC, BCP – will have to comply with the government's request and subsidise fuel prices at an aggregate amount of THB6-8.5b per month for three months. With additional hedging losses based on their 30-50% hedging policy, we estimate that their 3Q22 operating net profits will be diluted by 20-60%, with downsides ranging from the highest to the lowest: TOP (60%), PTTGC (50%), IRPC (40%), and BCP (20%).

SPRC, ESSO stand out with lower-than-peers subsidy costs and hedging losses

We prefer SPRC and ESSO as our two top picks in the Thai refinery sector. Given their lack of hedging losses and strong earnings growth visibility in 2Q22, which we estimate to be THB5.2b for SPRC and THB5.9b for ESSO in 1Q22, their core net profits from the q-q higher market GRMs will be offset by the q-q lower inventory gains. While IRPC, TOP, and PTTGC shares are now already trading at deep discounts to their replacement values, we think that due to the earnings downsides from their hedging losses and the high likelihood that as government-owned entities they will be forced to subsidise fuel prices, they are likely to see further potential valuation discounts, at least in the short-term.

RECOMMENDATION STRUCTURE

Stock ratings

Stock ratings are based on absolute upside or downside, which we define as (target price* - current price) / current price.

BUY (B). The upside is 10% or more.

HOLD (H). The upside or downside is less than 10%.

REDUCE (R). The downside is 10% or more.

Unless otherwise specified, these recommendations are set with a 12-month horizon. Thus, it is possible that future price volatility may cause a temporary mismatch between upside/downside for a stock based on market price and the formal recommendation.

* In most cases, the target price will equal the analyst's assessment of the current fair value of the stock. However, if the analyst doesn't think the market will reassess the stock over the specified time horizon due to a lack of events or catalysts, then the target price may differ from fair value. In most cases, therefore, our recommendation is an assessment of the mismatch between current market price and our assessment of current fair value.
