SCG PACKAGING (SCGP TB) - Limited impact from rising costs; Maintain BUY TP THB22.00

Limited earnings impact from Middle East tensions

The ongoing unrest in the Middle East is directly impacting the packaging industry—particularly plastic packaging—through higher oil prices, which are driving up resin and logistics costs. However, we estimate the impact on SCGP's earnings to be limited at only c2–4%.

Cost structure and raw material exposure

Approximately 75% of SCGP's revenue is derived from paper packaging, while 11% comes from plastic packaging. Key cost components for paper packaging include recycled paper (RCP) and energy, with RCP accounting for 22–25% of cost of goods sold (COGS). The company sources c65% of RCP domestically, with the remainder imported, with freight costs already embedded in selling prices. For plastic packaging, polymer resin accounts for 60–70% of production costs, with most costs locked in and only c35% linked to index pricing. A 30–40% YTD increase in resin prices could lift overall production costs by 8–9% annually, or c2% per quarter.

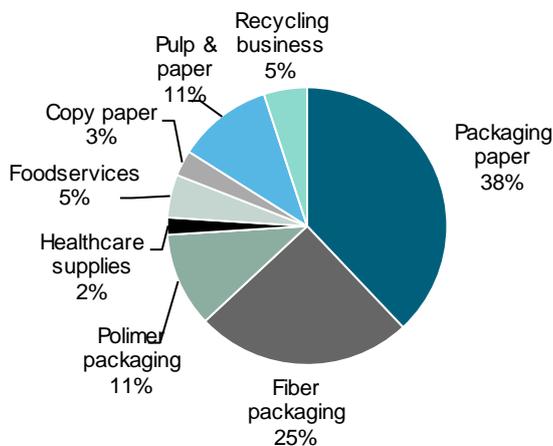

Energy and logistics cost mitigation

Energy costs account for 12–13% of COGS, with coal representing about half of total energy consumption, declining from 60–70% over the past three years. Around 20–25% of coal costs are price-locked, limiting the impact of a 20–25% YTD increase in coal prices to no more than 1.5% of production costs. Biomass usage has increased to 40%, further reducing exposure. Meanwhile, most logistics costs are already incorporated into selling prices, and the company's transition to electric trucks further mitigates cost pressures.

1Q26 core profit to remain flat to slightly higher q-q

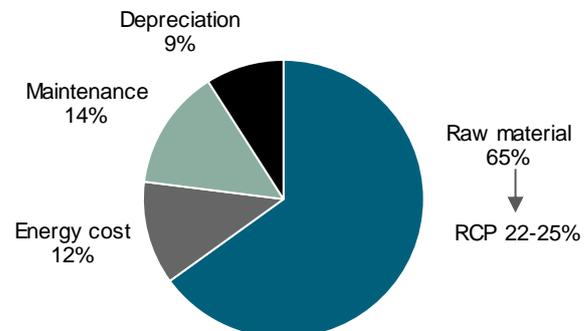

We expect 1Q26 core profit to remain stable or improve slightly q-q, supported by stronger domestic demand as Thai customers build inventory ahead of the Songkran festival, offsetting weaker volumes in Vietnam and Indonesia due to holiday effects. Any potential impact from Middle East tensions is likely to emerge in 2Q26. Given the temporary nature of the situation, we believe it is premature to revise our forecasts. We maintain our estimates and DCF-based TP of THB22, with a BUY rating.

STARFLEX (SFLEX TB) - Cost rising, margins intact; Maintain BUY TP THB3.70

Limited impact from rising costs

The ongoing unrest in the Middle East is directly impacting the packaging sector, particularly plastic packaging—SFLEX’s core business—through higher oil-linked raw material costs. Key inputs, accounting for 65–70% of total materials, include plastic films (e.g., LLDPE, WLLDPE, MOPP, MPET), while the remainder consists of solvents, adhesives, and inks, all derived from petrochemicals. Most raw materials are sourced domestically, and rising oil prices have led to a direct increase in input costs.

Cost pass-through and inventory buffer

As an OEM manufacturer, SFLEX is generally able to pass through higher raw material costs to customers. With inventory held at around 20–30 days, we expect limited immediate impact on margins, particularly in April.

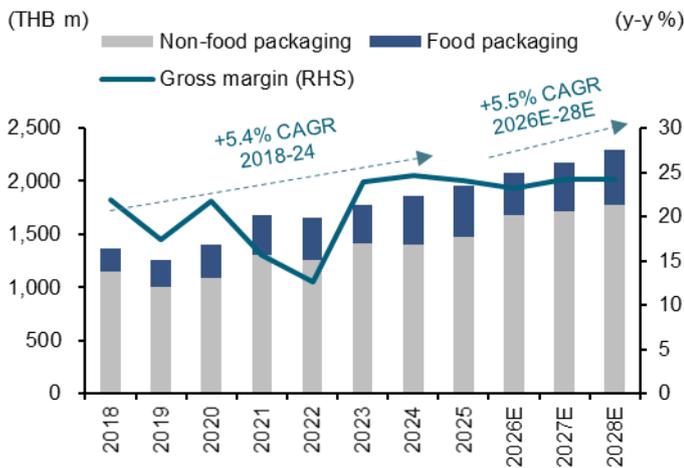

Operational efficiency and cost mitigation

The company has strengthened its resilience amid raw material volatility through supplier diversification to enhance bargaining power, upstream integration via blow film capacity, and investment in new machinery to improve efficiency, reduce waste, and lower labor dependency. Additional cost savings come from solar rooftop installation, helping to reduce energy expenses.

Limited downside risk and earnings sensitivity

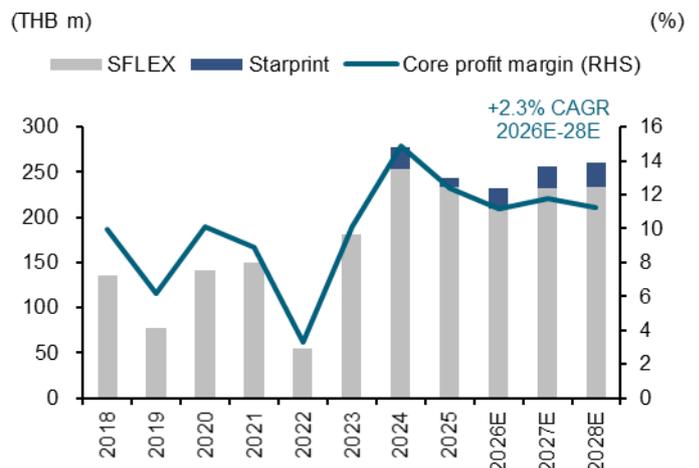

SFLEX also plans to participate in community development programs to qualify for BoI tax incentives, which are not yet reflected in our forecasts, suggesting limited downside risk to earnings. However, if cost pass-through is constrained, every 1% decline in gross margin would reduce earnings by c.6% annually, or less than 2% per quarter.

Economic news

- Higher power prices prompts push for solar BANGKOK POST: Small businesses and households are being urged to reduce their reliance on the state electricity grid and adopt solar power solutions, as global energy price volatility threatens to drive up costs, despite Thailand's capped power tariffs, according to solar firms. Caretaker energy minister Auttapol Rerkpiboon recently announced a temporary ceiling of 3.88 baht per kilowatt-hour for the period from May to August. But industry analysts warn that rising fuel prices, driven by the conflict in the Middle East, will eventually push electricity costs higher. Oil and liquefied natural gas (LNG) shipments through the Strait of Hormuz have been disrupted by the conflict, tightening global supply and inflating prices. New Energy Plus Solutions, a solar panel importer and installer, is calling on the incoming government to expand public access to solar technology. The company said that self-generation is the most sustainable way for households and small and medium-sized enterprises (SMEs) to shield themselves from future energy shocks.
- Rising costs pressure rice, water markets BANGKOK POST: Producers of bagged rice and bottled mineral water have said they will maintain current prices until the end of April, with any future price changes dependent on developments in the Middle East. Somkiat Makcayathorn, executive director of PRG Corporation Plc, the producer of Mah Boonkrong Rice, told the Bangkok Post that the conflicts in the Middle East affect all businesses. For the bagged rice industry, a key concern is the rising cost of plastic bags, which have increased by 25-60%, depending on the type and size. "Our current stock will last until the end of April. If the conflicts continue and high plastic prices persist, we will need to discuss price adjustments with the Commerce Ministry," he said. Bagged rice is not on the price control list and therefore does not require approval from the authorities for price changes, said Mr Somkiat.
- Call for urgent action to tackle rural oil shortage BANGKOK POST: The Federation of Thai Industries (FTI) has called on the government to intervene in support of oil middlemen, known locally as "jobbers", who are struggling to secure supplies from refineries, resulting in a shortage affecting industrial and agricultural sectors, as well as smaller filling stations not affiliated with major retail brands. Jobbers traditionally purchase oil directly from refineries and distribute it to farmers, factory owners and independent petrol stations in rural areas. However, the US-Iran conflict has disrupted global oil flows, prompting refineries to prioritise sales to their own branded outlets. This shift has left jobbers unable to meet demand in local communities. "Authorities should negotiate with refinery operators to ensure jobbers receive oil first, as they are the ones supplying villages and smaller communities," said Kriengkrai Thiennukul, chairman of the FTI. The government must also reassure the public that Thailand has sufficient oil reserves to prevent panic buying, he said. The FTI noted that many jobbers are facing liquidity problems, as the oil sold to them is priced higher than the fuel available at subsidised petrol stations. The Oil Fuel Fund offsets costs for branded stations, creating a price gap of 11-12 baht per litre. This disparity has reduced supply to manufacturing and farming sectors, raising concerns about broader economic impacts.
- Oil tax cuts possible if subsidies get too pricey BANGKOK POST: Officials at the Ministry of Finance are preparing measures to reduce excise taxes on fuel, as well as draft legislation to allow the Oil Fuel Fund to borrow additional funds to stabilise domestic prices. The Oil Fuel Fund is the main tool for stabilising domestic pump prices. The cost of doing so currently exceeds one billion baht a day. If the fund becomes overburdened, the government may need to use tax cuts as a supplementary measure, caretaker finance minister Ekniti Nitithanprapas said on Wednesday. The constitution bars a caretaker government from introducing tax or other financial measures that would obligate a future government. But the ministry's proposals will be submitted for consideration by the incoming administration, he said. The House of Representatives will meet on Thursday to elect a prime minister, after which a cabinet can be formed. The new government is expected to officially get to work in late March or early April. The finance ministry and the National Economic and Social Development Council have held discussions on the energy crisis, which has driven up global oil prices and affects all countries, Mr Ekniti said.

Corporate news

- Inflation-hit Bangkok Bank customers offered assistance BANGKOK POST: Bangkok Bank (BBL) is monitoring the impact of rising energy and raw material costs on its customers and is ready to extend financial support, says president Chartsiri Sophonpanich. Speaking after the bank's seminar titled "The Great Green Transition" on Tuesday, Mr Chartsiri said BBL is watching oil price movements and domestic energy price adjustments, which are expected to weigh on businesses and households. In the business sector, manufacturers are among the hardest hit as higher oil prices continue to drive up operating costs. The bank is prepared to provide additional liquidity to help ease financial pressure and enhance operational flexibility, he said. "Businesses primarily need sufficient liquidity to ensure their operations and production can continue without disruption, and the bank stands ready to fully support them," said Mr Chartsiri. Support spans both financial and non-financial services as the bank wants to manage asset quality prudently amid heightened risks and uncertainties, he said.
